Chapter 1

What is Social Work?

CHAPTER SUMMARY

However fast-moving and uncertain today's world may be, people are still at its core. People have problems that invite professional assistance: personal, family, and community. Social welfare is an important aspect of the modern way of life. Social work is a profession that focuses particularly on helping people solve their personal, family, and community problems through enhancing social functioning. It emphasizes human values and the intrinsic worth of all people. The basic functions of social work are (1) restoration of impaired social functioning, (2) provision of social services, and (3) prevention. Social work shares some knowledge and skills with sociology, psychiatry, psychology, and counseling, but it possesses distinguishing characteristics that set it apart from these disciplines. Social work is moving ahead as a progressive profession in the helping services arena.

CORE COMPETENCIES IN THIS CHAPTER

Competencies in bold are addressed significantly in this chapter.

Professional Identity	Ethical Practice	Critical Thinking	Diversity in Practice	Human Rights & Justice
Research Based Practice	Human Behavior	Policy Practice	Practice Contexts	Engage, Assess, Intervene, Evaluate

CHAPTER OBJECTIVES

After completing the chapter, students will be able to:

- Define Professional Social Work and Social Welfare
- Identify the underlying principles and assumptions of social work profession.
- Identify the distinguishing characteristics of professional social work
- Identify practice settings for careers in social work
- Distinguish between social work and other disciplines that contribute to social work knowledge-base and skills.

SUGGESTED DISCUSSION PROMPTS

1. Discuss some of the distinguishing characteristics that make social work a unique profession.
2. Discuss how social work is different from other human services professions such as sociology, psychology, counseling, and psychiatry.
3. Discuss why social work practice is considered an "art" with a scientific and value foundation.
4. Discuss the statement "social work practice values are not necessarily or altogether those universally or predominantly held or practiced in society."
5. Discuss how social workers "help clients help themselves."

SUGGESTED CHAPTER ACTIVITIES AND ASSIGNMENTS

1. This is a type of "pretest" activity. On the first or second day of class, ask students to write down what they "think" (in their opinion) a "professional" social worker does or is expected to do in an agency setting. The goal of this assignment is to assess students' initial understanding of social work as a "profession."
2. Ask students to identify as many elements as possible in their "total" environment to help them understand how various factors have an impact on their lives. The goal of this activity is help students understand why social work emphasizes on the "total person" in the "total environment."
3. Ask students to identify any 5 personal strengths and 5 personal limitations (including personal values that they hold) that will help and hinder their professional social work career.
