

Chapter 2

What is the Philosopher's Way?

Socrates and the Examined Life

CHAPTER SUMMARY

The Western tradition in philosophy is mainly owed to the ancient Greeks. Ancient Greek philosophers of record began appearing by about 600 BCE; these are called the pre-Socratic philosophers, because Socrates marked a turning point in Greek philosophy. Socrates had a distinctive and pioneering style of inquiry in which he simply proclaimed his own ignorance and asked probing questions of others. Socrates' dialectical method of philosophical conversation led to generating many highly influential ideas. Eventually, in conjunction with a number of other factors, Socrates' method of inquiry got him into trouble and he was accused of "corrupting the youth of Athens" and finally condemned to death.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

- 2.1 Explain why Socrates can be considered a model for humanity.
- 2.2 Define the Socratic Method and illustrate how it is used to investigate complex issues.
- 2.3 Define how Socrates defined the soul.
- 2.4 Relate the events in the trial and death of Socrates.

DISCUSSION PROMPTS

1. What kinds of values were espoused in Homer and Hesiod? How did these values encourage the discipline of philosophy in ancient Greece?
2. What was Socrates' philosophical aim? How did his philosophical method match up to his aim?
3. Why did Socrates say he was not wise? What was he able to accomplish by thinking this?
4. What was Socrates' theory of knowledge, and how did he apply it in philosophical practice?
5. How can you apply Socrates' method of inquiry in your own life?

Essay Questions

TB_02_16_Socrates: A Model for Humanity, Understand, LO_2.1

Describe the influence of Homer on early Greek thought. How did he pave the way for philosophical thought?

In the Western classical tradition Homer is the author of the Iliad and the Odyssey, and is revered as the greatest ancient Greek epic poet.

- These epics lie at the beginning of the Western canon of literature, and have had an enormous influence on the history of literature.
- Although often unflattering, Homer's depiction of the gods reinforced core values such as justice, order, clarity, developing one's intellect and cunning, harmony, moderation, beauty, courage, honesty and honor.

Describe the philosophical concerns of the pre-Socratic philosophers. How did their views differ from each other?

Thales believed the primal element of the universe was water, whereas Anaximenes thought it was air; and Heraclitus said fire because "All is change."

- Democritus said all matter in the universe was composed of indivisible atoms.
- Anaxagoras anticipated modern cosmology in proposing that the entire universe is composed of matter in motion.
- Pythagoras believed the fundamental principles of the universe were mathematical relations.
- Parmenides believed in a necessary, static, unchanging unity running throughout all of what is in flux in the world of experience.

In what way could the period of about 800 to 200 BCE be considered the "Axial Period" of history? What does this term mean?

"Axial" comes from "axis" (turning point). The 20th century philosopher Karl Jaspers called the period around 500 B.C. "the turning point of civilization" because so many astonishing advances in human consciousness occurred at this time in many parts of the world.

- Confucius, Lao-tse and others in China; the Upanishads and Buddha in India; Zarathustra in Iran; the Hebrew prophets Elijah, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Deutero-Isaiah; Homer, Plato, Heraclitus, Parmenides, and the great tragedians in Greece.

Describe and explain the underlying philosophy of knowledge that guided Socrates' method of knowledge.

Unlike the great pre-Socratic thinkers, Socrates was less concerned with the physics of the natural world than with the psychology of the mind.

- He developed his own methods of searching for knowledge based on the underlying intuition that all things have an intelligent cause directed toward what is best.
- Socrates brought philosophy "out of the clouds and into the market place," into the cities and houses of people.
- He loved the exploration and interplay of ideas in discussions with others, and through these experiences, he developed the Socratic Method.

Describe and explain how Socrates' self-concept guided his thoughts about wisdom and how to pursue it.

Socrates believed that his special wisdom consisted in his ability to stimulate and guide others in the philosophical exploration of profound questions, enabling them to "give birth" to their own understanding.

- Socrates believed the Oracle at Delphi called him the wisest man to make the point that his wisdom lies in knowing that he is not wise. Less wise people believe themselves to be wise.

Who were the sophists, and why did they oppose Socrates?

The Sophists were an influential group of traveling educators who, for a fee, would teach people how to argue persuasively.

- Many Sophists were “relativists” and “skeptics,” philosophical views that contend that knowledge is only a matter of opinion and truth is always relative to a particular context.
- Socrates was convinced that reason is the path to the truth.

TB_02_22_Socrates' Central Concern: The Soul, Apply, LO_2.3

What is the psyche, and what did Socrates believe about it? Why did he believe as he did?

For Socrates, the central concern of philosophy is the psyche, the true self or “soul,” which is immortal and imperishable: you core identity, the unique spirit that makes you distinctively you, your authentic personality, your distinctive character.

- According to Socrates, your soul is “immortal and imperishable, and after death should continue to exist in another world.”
- Every soul seeks happiness, Socrates believes, and there is a clearly defined path to achieving happiness, though many don't choose to take it.
- The unexamined life is not worth living: Socrates was convinced that we have a moral obligation to achieve our full human potential.

TB_02_23_Socrates' Central Concern: The Soul, Analyze, LO_2.3

What were the most central and important of Socrates' teachings? What do you think about them, at a first read?

Socrates's core teachings are:

- "The unexamined life is not worth living."
- The truth lies within each of us.
- We should strive for excellence in all areas of life.
- No one knowingly does evil.
- "It is better to suffer wickedness than to commit it."

Explain why Socrates was arrested. How did he respond to the charges against him?

At age 70, Socrates was charged with "corrupting the youth" and not believing in the state-approved gods. This was a cover for political opposition because he encouraged people to think for themselves rather than accept what authorities told them.

- Socrates responded to the charges by pointing out that those who accused him were liars and hypocrites, and (as with Meletus) using the Socratic Method of questioning and demanding clear definitions to key concepts in order to demonstrate that the charges made no sense.

Describe how Socrates greeted the news of his condemnation. How did his philosophy prepare him for this eventuality?

Because Socrates refused to demonstrate either remorse or respect for the power of the court, he was given the death penalty.

- Confronting death, Socrates is unwavering in his certainty that he has lived a life that is just and true, and he is secure in his confidence that no harm can come to one who has lived such a life. For a just and true individual, death cannot be something to be feared.
