83. Discuss the issue of drug testing for TANF recipients. Do you feel that drug testing is an appropriate action for social aid? What could be the consequences of such a policy? What other issues can affect the solutions and/or the problems related to social welfare?

*a. Answers may vary. In 2011, more than 36 states considered drug testing for Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) recipients. Opponents of this policy argue that punitive testing policies perpetuate the stereotype that people on public assistance are morally corrupt and more likely to use drugs. It also distracts from the need for access to drug treatment and prevention. A 2012 assessment of the Florida welfare drug-testing law revealed that there were no direct savings for the state; contrary to the law's intent, it did not identify many drug users and had no effect on reducing the number of individuals applying for welfare assistance. The Florida law was struck down by a federal appeals court in 2014; the court ruled that the state failed to demonstrate that drug abuse was more prevalent or unique among TANF clients than in the general population.

84. Discuss how health can be affected by poverty. Why are the poor more likely to suffer from health issues? What are the issues that you feel are most important to the topic? Discuss how neighborhood conditions might exacerbate health inequalities.

*a. Answers may vary. Scholars have found that many factors, including standard of living, work conditions, housing conditions, access to better-quality food, leisure activities, and the social and psychological connections with others, play a role in determining health status. For those in poverty, these conditions are less predictable and often lacking. The poor have little time or opportunity to practice healthy activities, including exercise and eating healthful foods. In addition, lack of financial resources limits access to preventative and therapeutic health care. Neighborhood conditions play a key role in health disparities, as poor, unsafe housing conditions contribute to infectious and chronic diseases, injuries, and illnesses, including lead poisoning when children eat peeling paint. Neighborhoods may also expose the poor to hazardous conditions, including air, noise, water, and chemical pollution.
